UK Outlook for Wednesday 29 Dec 2021 to Friday 7 Jan 2022:
To begin the period, rain will move east across the UK, with some transitory snow likely to affect the high ground in the north. Potential for rain to be heavy and persistent, particularly in the west. Temperatures mild for most, with the chance of some strong coastal gales affecting the south and west. Unsettled conditions likely to continue for most, but the chance for some drier and brighter spells in the south east at times. Heading into January, Atlantic weather systems likely to move in from the west, bringing further unsettled conditions and potentially heavy rain for some. Between these systems, drier and brighter periods likely but still a chance of showers. Unsettled weather to continue to end the period, with showers or longer spells of rain likely.
